

CQG Offers Need to Know News Economic Release Bullets

Denver, CO, September 16, 2008 – CQG announced today that Need to Know News Economic Release Bullets, an elementized news data feed detailing U.S. economic releases, is now available on the CQG data line.

The economic release data can be visualized in real-time through any of CQG's quote displays. CQG includes historical economic report data for chart analysis and backtesting.

Algorithmic traders have the ability to access real-time economic release data in their own applications for automated trading via the CQG Integrated Client API. Traders can also employ trading strategies directly from the CQG Integrated Client using CQG Alerts to monitor deviations between estimated economic reports and actual release numbers.

Need to Know News Economic Release Bullets includes actual, estimated, and revised report data for over fifty U.S. economic reports including employment data, producer and consumer price data, housing data, GDP, and more.

"Need to Know News is excited to offer this product to CQG where typically our competition reserve this data to their elite clients," said Clint Rhea, Chief Operating Officer of NTKN. "Besides offering our radio and text product, Economic Release Bullets allow CQG clients to make informed decisions given the wealth of information NTKN disseminates, we are excited about this new opportunity with CQG."

"News moves the markets. Today, more and more financial institutions are incorporating algorithmic trading strategies using elementized news feeds to gain an edge," said Jim Moock, Director of Business Development at CQG. "We are pleased to offer the NTKN Economic Release Bullets as an addition to our expanding solutions in the institutional trading space."

About Need to Know News

Initially a supplier of Scream Audio broadcasts of economic releases and news for the electronic trader, in 2007 Need to Know News began providing computer-readable news for algorithmic trading. The company's Lightning Bolt service quickly became the leading news-feed integrated into sophisticated banks and hedge funds algorithms. With news bureaus and data centers linked together via state-of-the-art infrastructure in North America and Europe, the next natural progression in expanding Need to Know News' product line was the creation of Essential, the first and only scrolling news service designed exclusively for electronic traders.
